Stephen A. Douglas.

If there is a man North that to any other of that region, it is Stephen A. Douglas. Manly, bold, and talented, he has never compromised with Abolitionism or Free Soil. He is truly a national man, who knows no North or South. He is hated with a most holy malignity by the whole anti-slavery party of the free States, and as evidently admired by every national man of that region. These are the Whigs of the South, who have been better Whigs than the editor of the journal, who would rather see any other man in the Union struck down than Stephen A. Douglas. Indeed, he is so identified with the national men of the free States, and so conspicuous for his talents and boldness, as to universally the target at which all Abolitionists are hurled, that his fall would be the loss of the Spartan band, and a shout of malignant triumph would go up from every Abolitionist convert in the Union. That such a man should be denounced in the South is incredible. We didn't suppose that even the editor of the Journal would venture upon such a paragraph as this, which appeared in his paper of yesterday morning:

Senator Douglas has deserved of the next President, but is doing all the mischief in his power, and is a most popular spirit. The country, we think, will be greatly delighted when he is no longer with us. He is a man who does not wish to be troubled with him, dead, but in case he should be, enough to attempt suicide, it would be a pity he were not to succeed.

We ask any man who still thinks that the South is entitled to some slight respect in this Union, what his Stephen A. Douglas, and what is he still doing? He supported the annexation of Texas, against the whole Abolition phalanx of his section of the Union. He supported the annexation of 1850. He stood for the bold and eloquent, and talented champion of the Nebraska bill, and a shout of malignant triumph would go up from every Abolitionist convert in the Union.

That such a man should be denounced in the South is incredible. We didn't suppose that even the editor of the Journal would venture upon such a paragraph as this, which appeared in his paper of yesterday morning:

Lauding the Know-Nothing nominees for Governor, he declared the race, and a State Council of the order will be held in this city, on the 29th inst., to nominate a candidate in his place.

At the same time, the Councils of the Congressional Districts will meet in Louisville, to nominate a candidate for Congress.
